

BREAKOUT!

When we look at dinosaurs in the museum, we imagine them alive. Maybe you'd like to add flesh to their bones and see them roaring — baring their enormous teeth. Perhaps you'd even like to see them break out of their displays and charge through the building! (You know that this couldn't happen, of course, since dinosaurs died out millions of years ago.)

But maybe you don't know just how many of these amazing creatures once lived right here in Canada. If you walk in some parts of Alberta's Dinosaur Provincial Park, for example, you'll likely be stepping on dino bones and teeth. It is the single richest fossil site in the world — over 500 skeletons of 36 different kinds of dinosaurs have been uncovered there.

If you want to discover dinosaurs, Canada is one of the best countries in the world in which to look.
